I met someone. We have a pet. Her family is all from St. John's or all from Newfoundland, but she has family near St. John's as everyone from Newfoundland tends to have. So her and her family looked for apartments. We had boots on the ground, so to speak, to go into each of the units for us, kinda scope everything out.

We found a place near to downtown because that tends to be cheaper than around the university. It was a walk uphill both ways to get to, uphill to Memorial [University] and uphill from Memorial to anyone who's wondering. It's in a bit of a valley. So I had to walk over the hill from downtown and then down to Memorial and then back up the hill and then down to the, and back down.

So, that was good. We thankfully, I worked for a few years. I could afford a car. If you move to St. John's, anyone, buy a car. Transit does not work in the winter, and you can get anywhere you need in St. John's and the surrounding area, Mount Pearl and whatnot in about 15, 20 minutes. Like, if you do not like driving, St. John's is great because everywhere is, like, 50 or 60 kilometers an hour except for, like, 3 roads, and you can get anywhere you need to.

So that's part of the reason I like St. John's because if I needed to get somewhere, I could. If the weather was bad, they tend to shut everything down. Being from Alberta, nothing gets shut down when the weather is bad. They just go to work. So that was, it was nice when, that happened. However, it was also a little rough because I had a final get cancelled due to a snowstorm. And then, which is change, and I dislike change. And then I had to get up in the morning and walk there because you can't really park in a lot of places when there's a snowstorm.
